Several hundred Alumni returning to the campus for class reunions during Commencement Week End attended the dedication of Carr Hall. Above, are a few of the views of the College's new Fine Arts Center witnessed by the returning sons and daughters of Middlebury. The building is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Reid L. Carr.

Middlebury In The News

Dr. Stewart Ross, Mr. William Edmunds Elected Trustees; Mrs. Elizabeth Baker Kelly Appointed Dean of Women

Announcement of new appointments on the Board of Trustees and administrative staff of the College was made recently by President Stratton.

By vote of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Stewart A. Ross, '20, physician and surgeon of Rutland, Vt., was appointed a Life Trustee of Middlebury College, and William H. Edmunds, '17, Burlington, Vt., attorney, was appointed a five-year term trustee.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Kelly, Chairman of the College's Administrative Committee for Women for the past two years, was appointed Dean of Women.

Dr. Ross, a term trustee for the past five years, was graduated from Middlebury and from Harvard Medical College, and has maintained medical practice in Rutland since 1925. He served with the Students Army Training Corps in 1918, and as a captain in the U. S. Navy Medical Corps during World War II.

Mr. Edmunds is a graduate of Middlebury and Harvard Law School. He served in the U. S. Army during World War I and was admitted to the Vermont bar in 1922. He maintains law practice in the Burlington firm of Austin &

Edmunds. For the past five years he has been an alumni trustee of the College.

Mrs. Kelly joined the Middlebury staff in 1946 as Social Director. She is a graduate of Mount Holyoke College and studied at the University of Maine and the University of Connecticut.

During World War II she served with the American Red Cross in Australia, The Philippines, and principal islands in the Pacific theatre of operations. In September, 1949, Mrs. Kelly was appointed Chairman of the Administrative Committee for Women, an interim committee which performed the duties of Dean of Women.

Middlebury Accepts Invitation to Undertake Program with Columbia

Middlebury College has accepted an invitation from the Columbia University School of Engineering to join with that school in a five-year joint program of studies.

Under this plan for a broader education in engineering, a student entering Middlebury, and following a course of study as outlined by both schools, may transfer to the Columbia School of Engineering at the end of three years. The student will attend Columbia for two years, and after successfully meeting the graduation requirements of both institutions, he will be granted the appropriate bachelor's degree from each. In this way the student of high standing may combine a liberal arts course with an education in engineering and save one year.

Letter to the Editor

Editor, NEWS LETTER

Dear Sir:

We, the undersigned members of this year's committee appointed by President Stratton to recommend a suitable candidate for the Fife Memorial Scholarship, desire to utilize your columns to make a report to the donors of the Fife Memorial Fund, and to all the friends of Professor Fife among the Alumni.

The present balance in this fund, which is in the hands of the College Treasurer, is $1120.77. The Trustees a year ago voted to offer an annual scholarship from this fund, so long as it lasts, deeming it wiser to do thus rather than to make a token prize from the interest alone. It is hoped that this disposition of the fund will meet with the approval of the donors. The scholarship will be of $200 per annum.

We desire also to avail ourselves of this opportunity to advise all readers that this fund is not closed. Many may not have clearly understood from the brochure on Professor Fife that an appeal for this Fund was being made, and may wish to contribute now. It may be too that previous donors will wish to add a new gift to the Fund as some have already done, in order that its life may thus be prolonged. All gifts to this fund should be clearly marked "Professor Fife Memorial Fund" and sent to the Treasurer, Middlebury College. Any who may have been overlooked in the mailing out of the brochures on [Continued on page 16]

College News Bureau Seeks Aid Of Alumni and Alumnae In Establishing Middlebury Clipping Service

As a move toward saving much needed Middlebury dollars, the College News Bureau asks the cooperation of the Alumni and Alumnae in forming a Middlebury College Alumnae Clipping Service. Needed are volunteers to clip items about Middlebury from their local newspapers and forward them to the News Bureau office in Old Chapel. In the past a professional news clipping bureau has been providing this necessary service, at a considerable cost. It is felt that a successfully organized Alumni clipping program can practically or even completely abolish the need for a professional clipping service. During the past few years the volume of items about Middlebury has been steadily increasing in the nation's newspaper, and so has the College's clipping bill!

Volunteer clippers may choose to cover just one newspaper or, in small communities, a whole area. They will be provided with stamped envelopes in which they may send items to the News Bureau. Also provided will be identification tabs which can be attached to each clipping, indicating the newspaper and date.

Such a plan is now being successfully operated by other colleges with several advantages aside from economy being noted. One great advantage is that Middlebury men and women could spot many items about Alumni which, because no mention is made of Middlebury, could never be picked up by a professional bureau. Many of the Alumni and Alumnae have done this sort of work on their own initiative in past years. Notable among these volunteers is Linwood B. Law, [Continued on page 16]

Many Alumni and Alumnae have complimented the efficient operation of the June Commencement Reunion. Much credit should go to the secretarial staff of the Alumni Office which handled the bulk of the hard work. They are, left to right: Helene G. M. Bernard Sears, '34 (Mrs. James), Miss Mary McDonald, Mrs. Clara Sem, and Mrs. Ruth Smith. Philip Hull, '50, is shown checking in at the registration desk during the Commencement Week End.

Trustee Wiggin Dies After Long Illness

Albert H. Wiggin, a member of the Middlebury College Board of Trustees since 1922, died at his home in Greenwich, Conn., on May 21, after a long illness.

Mr. Wiggin, who began as a bank clerk in Boston, rose to become head of one of the world's largest banks. As a banker-diplomat, he lent his mature advice in several national and international crises and for several decades he was among the most important financial figures in the world.

Mr. Wiggin never sought personal publicity, and his benefactions, which covered a wide field generally were anonymous. In the cultural field, he was a distinguished collector of paintings, rare prints, manuscripts and books. The Wiggin Collection and Donation housed in a special exhibit gallery of the Boston Public Library, enjoys an international reputation. There are few better collections of British and French artists of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Liberia Stamp Honors Middlebury College Alumnus

Liberia, the negro state in Africa, has issued an attractive bicolored set of postage stamps to honor Jehudi Ashman, of the class of 1816 and one of the greatest of those who helped the early settlers of that country.

After preparing for the ministry and serving briefly as a professor of theology in Bangor, Me., he went to Washington. While there he came in contact with the American Colonization Society, which was attempting to provide a permanent home on the east coast of Africa for freed negroes.

Ashman was appointed Colonial Agent, and left on what was supposed to be an observation trip only. When he arrived at what is now Monrovia in 1882, he found the first settlements in a state of chaos. Sickness and troubles with the natives had taken a heavy toll, and he started to get the settlement squared away.

Although Ashman lost his wife and lived only a few years more himself, it was he who was principally responsible for the success of the African colony. When he was 36 he was forced to return to this country for his health, and he died shortly afterwards at New Haven, Conn., where he is buried.

Bailey Drawing Is Presented To Middlebury

A pen-and-ink sketch of Middlebury College's upper campus, which has appeared on thousands of dining car menus along the New York Central System as a tribute to Middlebury has been presented to the College by the railroad. The sketch was made by Vernon Howe Bailey, famous architectural artist.

The Bailey drawing was reproduced for a special edition of the New York Central's series of dining car menus which honor colleges and universities served by its routes. More than 6,000,000 guest meals are served annually in the railroad's dining cars.

Vernon Howe Bailey was official artist for the U. S. Navy in both World Wars, sketching shipyard scenes and naval activities. Among Bailey's well-known series of sketches are those on the Vatican and on the Skyscrapers of New York. He has sketched most of the outstanding buildings of North America and Europe during his long career.

The First Annual Texas Middlebury Alumni Dinner was a great success. Members of the planning committee were, left to right: Miss Priscilla R. Noyes, '49; Mrs. Caroline Clark Noyes, '09; and Radcliffe W. Lyon, '23.

Dr. Frank P. Piskor, '37, counsels a student veteran on a problem of reenlistment, part of his duty as Dean of Men and military adviser at Syracuse University.

ALUMNUS HOLDS IMPORTANT DEANSHIP

Dr. Frank P. Piskor, '37, who was known as a Chi Psi and honor student in his undergraduate days at Middlebury, is known today to thousands of Syracuse University students as the man with the answers on problems of military training.

Dr. Piskor, whose full-time work as Dean of Men includes the counseling and housing of more than 7,000 men, recently became the university's "clearing house" on Selective Service and enlistment information. The scope of his new duties even extends into high schools where he provides guidance data for personnel counselors.

While Washington fluttered between stringent and lenient policies on the draft deferment of college men, Dean Piskor kept his charges posted on the latest directives. From the blizzard of official decrees and unofficial statements he succeeded in obtaining data on each day's Selective Service development, interpreting it and relaying it to students through personal interviews and the campus newspaper.

At the outbreak of World War II, many college guidance counselors told men to "sit tight" and see what happened. Students were confused, and many were "frightened" into enlistments as privates or seamen by "scare" headlines, politicians' frenzied speeches, and zealous recruiting teams.

Determined that the situation will not recur, Dean Piskor has approached the problem from a more positive tack, advising instead that his students get the maximum amount of college training behind them before enlisting or being drafted into the military forces.

Students who heeded his advice were on campus last May to take the government-sponsored Selective Service College Qualifications Test, and many of them who passed the examinations will return to Syracuse as students in the fall term.

Dr. Piskor became one of the university's youngest deans when he was named to his present post in 1946 at the age of 30. He already had had nearly seven years' experience on the institution's administrative staff, including three years as acting dean of men.

After graduating with honors from Middlebury where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, he went to Syracuse for graduate study in public personnel administration, [Continued on page 16]

REPORTING THE STUDENT SIDE OF MIDDLEBURY NEWS

Wendy Forbes, '51 is the first man in the athletic history of Middlebury College to win twelve varsity sports letters. Director of Athletics Arthur M. Brown, on the occasion of the presentation of the twelfth letter said, "in my forty-two years in sports I have never seen a more versatile athlete." Forbes matriculated at Middlebury in 1947 after serving in the U. S. Navy during World War II. During his freshman year he played on the varsity football and hockey teams. He was a member of the College's baseball team which, for three consecutive years, won the Vermont collegiate baseball championship. Coach Walter J. (Duke) Nelson '32, who has had Forbes on two teams—football and hockey for four years—sums up the general estimate on the campus of Middlebury's first twelfth-letter man. "His equal is difficult to find in small colleges. Wendy Forbes is the type of athlete every coach dreams about, not only is he an excellent all-round athlete but he is also a high-ranking student and a gentleman." Forbes was recently awarded the Stabile Memorial Trophy which was established in honor of Lt. John Stabile '40, former Middlebury football captain, who was killed in action in 1942. The cup is awarded annually to the athlete who best exemplifies the Middlebury spirit.

By the narrow, yet decisive margin of three quarts, Middlebury College student volunteers established a new State of Vermont blood donor record this spring. The Red Cross Mobile Blood Collection Unit revealed that the 164-quart total contributed by Middlebury men and women, topped the previous record of 161 quarts of blood donated to Vermont Mobile units in one day. . . . Alan M. Gussow, '52, has been named Editor-in-Chief of the CAMPUS. Patricia A. McKenna, '53, will be the Managing Editor for the new College year. Edward S. Hickcox, '53, has been appointed sports editor. . . . Raymond A. Ablondi, '52, and Jacqueline A. Johnson, '52, have been awarded the second annual Charles Baker Wright Scholarships. The scholarships pay full tuition costs for the senior year of two students and are awarded each year to two members of the Junior Class who have partially earned their way through at least two and one-half college years. Consideration is also given to the students' character, scholarship, citizenship and need. The scholarships were established last year in memory of Charles Baker Wright, Dean and Professor of English at Middlebury for thirty-five years.

Dr. Douglas S. Beers, Head of the English Department has been given a leave of absence by the College for the second semester of the 1951-52 academic year. Dr. Mischa H. Fayer, Russian Department Head, will be absent during the fall term of the new College year. . . . A faculty lounge was opened recently in Hillcrest. . . . Middlebury placed second at the Annual Dartmouth Woodsmen's Week End this spring. The Panthers scored only forty-eight points less than the total of 1,170 points made by Dartmouth. . . . The College Choir gave a repeat performance of its Town Hall (N. Y.) Concert at Rollins Chapel, Hanover, N. H., on May 9th. The concert was sponsored by a group of Alumni, Alumnae, and friends of the College and was made possible by the cooperation of the Dartmouth College Music Department.

Dr. David K. Smith, '42, Assistant Professor of Economics, has been selected by the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company of Hartford for a 1951 summer Fellowship to study business methods within the Company. These Fellowships are offered to college professors under the College-Business Exchange Program sponsored by the Foundation for Economic Education. The Program is designed to provide teachers of Economics with a background of experience which can lead to more effective teaching, and it provides business men with a better understanding of classroom problems and procedures.

Frank C. Partridge Memorial Sunday was observed April 29, at the College when Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, a leading Congregational Christian churchman, spoke in Mead Memorial Chapel. Each year a distinguished clergyman or layman is invited to address the College on the subject of "Man's Need for Christianity." The program is sponsored by the Honorable Redfield Proctor in memory of his life-long friend, Frank C. Partridge, who was for many years a trustee of the College. Dr. Buschmeyer is associate minister of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches. He is a native of Los Angeles, California, and holds degrees in religious education and theology from Boston University. He has held pastorates in Washington, D. C., Brookline, Mass., Durham and Manchester, N. H.

Frank L. Fernbach, a representative of the United National Steelworkers of America (CIO) spoke on "Labor and the Mobilization Effort" at the College on April 27, under the sponsorship of the Alpha Sigma Psi fraternity. This was the second lecture sponsored by Alpha Sigma Psi. Mrs. Vera Michaels, Dean of the Foreign Policy Association, was the first speaker of the fraternity lecture program. . . . Chester E. Nightingale, '51, has been awarded the Chi Psi fraternity scholarship of $200 for the 1951-52 academic year. The scholarship award was made by Casey Jones, '55, Chi Psi alumni president. Each year, the national organization of Chi Psi awards a $200 scholarship to all chapters which have maintained a house scholarship average above the average for the entire men's college on their respective campuses. This scholarship is then awarded by that chapter to "a member of the Chi Psi fraternity who has exhibited promise in scholarship and qualities of leadership, and wholesome influence and character in the activities of his college and fraternity."

Dr. Stephen A. Freeman, vice-president of the College and Director of the Language Schools, will travel to Paris next fall to supervise the Middlebury Graduate School of French in France during its first semester. . . . Joe Jones, has resigned as manager of the College Snow Bowl and coach of the Middlebury women's ski team. . . . Marcia L. McIntire was presented the Optima Award this spring. This prize was established in 1929 in memory of a Middlebury graduate and trustee. Consisting of $200, it is given annually to the junior woman who, by vote of her class, is considered [Continued on page 16]

151st Year Commencement

More than 1500 Parents, Alumni and Guests attend Ceremony in World War II Memorial Field House

SPEAKING at Middlebury College's 151st year Commencement on June 18, Wayne A. Johnston, president of the Illinois Central Railroad declared that "liberty and abundance go together" and that to brush aside the importance or material achievements would be "downright foolish." He said that the human spirit is crushed where people have "accepted bondage in hope of material rewards."

There were 228 candidates for degrees in the class. Mr. Johnston reminded them not to forget that they are "sons and daughters of a great race—the American race." Continuing he said, "you are the descendants of people who chose the hard road of self-government and economic independence. We have more of everything than any other people on earth. Sometimes young people are disposed to brush aside the importance of material achievements. That is a downright foolish point of view."

"Not only do we have abundant wealth, we also have the kind of life that enables us to enjoy that abundance. Rightfully we turn our backs upon those who ask us to give up our kind of life to trade our liberties for a hope of greater abundance. For when we look about us we see that liberty and abundance go together. Nowhere in the world is the human spirit so crushed as in those lands where people have accepted bondage in hope of material rewards."

In concluding his address the Commencement speaker said, "ahead of you graduates is a world that needs your idealism, your education, your keen minds, and strong bodies. By intelligence and by training you are prepared to become leaders in that world. Your opportunities are great. I envy you, I admire you and I bid you Godspeed."

IN HIS REMARKS to the graduating class at the Baccalaureate Service on Sunday, June 17, the Reverend Douglas V. Reed of St. Augustine's Vicarage, Belveder, England, said in part:

"Your diploma will give you a right to be considered as a man or a woman who has been trained to think and who has that entré into a society which cannot be bought with blood or money—the society of the men of learning, the men of counsel, the men who fashion and determine the way in which mankind will tread. You will have this privilege. Accept it humbly and with gratitude. It is not the acknowledgement of your peers; it is the seal of those who have tested and have proven their abilities. A general who has not seen a field of battle may pin a medal on the breast of a hero; but only one accepted and established in the realms of erudition can give to you the decoration of graduation."

He continued:

"Graduation is a great and an honorable privilege. But like all privileges it brings with it great and onerous responsibilities. You can no longer say, 'I have a duty to educate myself. I have been trained and equipped; I must use that training and equipment as a holy trust lest I be unfaithful and fritter the labors of others.' For it is ultimately true that in the last issue a man must educate himself. True knowledge, true learning, true wisdom and counsel can only be acquired by your own diligence. You have profited by the training in thinking and evaluation by those who have given their lives to the search of wisdom; now you must take over and use what they have given you that you may become men and women of counsel."

Eighty-three women and 145 men received degrees at the 151st year Commencement Exercises

Case

PRESIDENT Samuel S. Stratton conferred the honorary degrees upon eight persons, citing them, in part, as follows:

WAYNE A. JOHNSTON—Doctor of Laws: "In rising from a minor post to the presidency of the Illinois Central Railroad, you give reaffirmation to the American tradition—to provide equality of opportunity to all who seek advancement by their own endeavors."

PHILIP SHOWALTER HENCH—Doctor of Laws: "For your contributions to the physical welfare of mankind as head of the Section of Rheumatic Diseases of the Mayo Clinic. . . . may I express the sincere pleasure of conferring this honorary degree upon the father of Mary Showalter Hensch, beloved member of the Class of 1951.

GEORGE W. MERCK—Doctor of Laws: "As chairman of the board of Merck and Company, manufacturing chemists, outstanding success in your business career has meant direct, obvious, and important contributions to the health and welfare of your fellow men."

WILLIAM S. CARLSON—Doctor of Laws: "Teacher, soldier, explorer, geologist, expert on Arctic regions, university president. . . . your record of achievement makes you eminently worthy not only of the high post you now hold in our state, but also of the reputation which is yours in educational circles throughout the country."

DOUGLAS V. REED—Doctor of Divinity: "We welcome you to our honorary fellowship, first because of your scholarly and Christian contribution to your own vicarage and more importantly to that great body of thoughtful and devout American cousins who have shared your thoughts as editor of the Rochester Diocesan Chronicle."

ELECTRA HAVEMEYER WEBB—Doctor of Humanities: "Today we recognize in you a diligent Vermonter who, with good taste and competence, is collecting and preserving for all New Englanders a tangible record of our early culture and institutions."

LIVINGSTON W. HOUSTON—Doctor of Science: "We invite you to become a member of our honorary alumni because you are a distinguished president of one of our leading engineering institutes because we subscribe to your objectives in the all-important task of giving us sound men to lead us into the unknown future of scientific and technical progress."

THEODORE MORRISON—Doctor of Letters: "Skilled teacher of English composition able director of Harvard University's untiring efforts to produce literate graduates . . . distinguished director of our Bread Loaf Writers' Conference . . . we welcome you to the honorary fellowship of Middlebury men and women."

Many Alumni, Alumnae Attend Colorful Commencement Week End

The Commencement Alumni Week end, June 16-18, was again a big success as nearly 1500 persons attended the annual Reunion Barbecue in the World War II Memorial Field House on Saturday, June 16. In the evening, reunions were held by the following classes: 1896, 1901, 1906, 1911, 1916, 1921, 1926, 1931, 1936, 1941, and 1946.

The McCullough Reunion Cup, awarded each year to the reunion class having the highest per cent of its living members present at Commencement, was awarded to the Class of 1911. Mr. and Mrs. Russell P. Dale of Longmeadow, Mass., accepted the McCullough Cup on behalf of their winning class.

William H. Edmunds, '17, of Burlington, chairman of the 1950-51 Alumni Fund Drive, announced that the goal of $17,500 had been surpassed.

According to Mr. Edmunds, the 1951 Alumni Fund Drive for scholarships realized $17,988.53. Listed among the Alumni and Alumnae contributing to the Fund were 1779 men and women. Other donations were received from friends of the College and parents of students. A list of the Alumni and Alumnae who contributed to the 1951 Fund will be published in the fall issue of the NEWS LETTER.

A new Alumni award, the LaFlamme Bowl, will be given annually to the class group which has the highest percentage of participation. [Continued on page 17]

The men of the Class of 1902 won the LaFlamme Bowl by having 100 per cent of its members contributing to the 1951 Alumni Fund. Dr. Hermon E. Hasseltine (right) is shown accepting the award on behalf of his class. The presentation was made by William H. Edmunds, '17, Fund Chairman.

Commencement Reunion Classes

Mathematics at Middlebury College

By PROFESSOR JOHN G. BOWKER

"DOES Middlebury really have a Mathematics Department?" I was asked this absurd question upon being introduced to a mid-westerner last summer. Middlebury to him meant the Summer Language Schools, Bread Loaf, and skiing. Actually, based on student registration in our courses in recent years, the Mathematics Department is tenth in size among the twenty-seven academic departments of the College. It is very interesting to note that more than one student in four elects work in this generally considered unpopular field even though Middlebury has had no mathematics requirement for graduation since 1935 and courses in mathematics fulfill none of the specified group requirements. During World War II and the days of the Navy V-12 unit, our regular program was expanded to include eight additional Navy courses in mathematics and our normal staff of three swelled to eleven teachers. But otherwise, the Mathematics Department has quietly continued during the past two decades to meet the ever increasing demands of the natural sciences for students whose mathematical tools are sharp and the needs of industry in its myriad forms for personnel trained to think precisely and reason analytically. These are attributes usually considered as by-products of the study of mathematics.

Such demands have provided us with a stimulative challenge during the post-war years and all would be well were we not faced with a new problem over which we have almost no control. Students entering college today are on the whole less well-prepared than in the past even though a majority of them have as many entrance credits in secondary mathematics as ever before. The reasons for the failure of the secondary schools to provide the necessary preparation for college study are not readily apparent. Some authorities point to the distractions of modern life, to the spread of the high-school curriculum over wider areas with a diminution of the quantity and quality of work in the more rigorous disciplines. Teachers in secondary and preparatory schools today are certainly better trained teachers than those of twenty or thirty years ago. In the field of mathematics these teachers are far more advanced in their knowledge of the subject matter. In fact, there are many superior mathematicians devoting their lives to public and private secondary teaching and these men and women should be able to discriminate between the essential and the not so important basic concepts. However, the most essential concepts are not very exciting to teach and the teacher's own enthusiasm to demonstrate the power of his subject frequently carries him astray. This results in students entering college able to differentiate and integrate transcendental as well as algebraic functions but these same people are often unable to solve a simple quadratic equation. Algebra is the basis of all branches of higher mathematics and the student who enters college without having acquired its elementary techniques is in a position similar to the freshman, described recently by Dr. Beers in the NEWS LETTER, who enters English 11 ignorant of the essentials of grammar and unable to write a complete sentence. The increased demands for a better student product of our colleges has really posed a difficult problem for the college teacher of today.

PROFESSOR BOWKER who is known and admired by many Alumni was graduated from Tufts College in 1924 and taught two years at Framingham, Mass. before coming to Middlebury in 1926. He was awarded his EdM degree by Harvard University in 1931, has done graduate work at the University of Michigan and spent the year 1938-39 studying statistics under Professor E. S. Pearson at the Galton Laboratory, University of London, England.

In recent years at Middlebury about one hundred men and twenty women have elected mathematics in the freshman year. These students come from many different schools and widely scattered geographical locations. The disparity in their preparation creates a serious problem to which the Mathematics Department staff has been devoting much study of late. Two years ago we offered a course, Mathematics 12, designed to be somewhat more advanced than the regular Mathematics 11. Our immediate problem then became that of the selection of students for this advanced course. We find the College Entrance Examination Board M-score quite dependable as a medium of selection. In addition we give a placement test during freshman week. A combination of these results supplemented by interviews in questionable cases has proved extremely reliable. None of the students selected last fall was transferred back from the 12 course to the 11 course after the work started though provision for such transfer is made in the scheduling of the several sections. Now that the year's work is near an end, we realize that there were five or six more freshmen who should have had the more advanced course but, of course, we cannot provide for shifts in that direction during the year. Both courses, 11 and 12, end at the same level. Thus, the student electing more mathematics goes on with the Mathematics 21 during his sophomore year regardless of which freshman course he has completed. Formerly the first half of the freshman course was review for well-prepared students and there was too great a chance that lazy study habits might result. While the Mathematics 11 people are refreshing their algebra and mastering trigonometry during the first semester, those in the 12 course are learning to distinguish college algebra from intermediate algebra!

The demands of physics and chemistry are largely responsible for the pressure to teach calculus to freshmen in order that its powerful methods shall be available. We have been teaching analytic geometry and calculus in the second half of the first year course since 1928. However, the Department staff has not lost sight of the needs of those who elect the course to learn in a year's time something of the nature and scope of the subject. This first year course is of the unified type consisting of algebra, trigonometry, analytic geometry, and an introduction to the calculus woven into a logical whole with no opportunities lost to apply new techniques to situations familiar to freshmen. I've heard students refer to the course as mathematical hash but hash can be both tasty and nourishing if made with proper ingredients. We feel that the freshman course offers an extremely important body of basic information for any student in a liberal arts curriculum and we are confident that it is a thoroughly satisfactory experience for the many whose formal work in mathematics ends here. Some familiarity with the methods and results of mathematics has always been regarded as an indispensable part of the intellectual equipment of every cultured person.

The requirements for majors in chemistry, physics, and the M.I.T. and Columbia engineering plans in addition to those in straight liberal arts mathematics, insure a considerable number continuing with the sophomore course, usually about forty percent. This course amounts to the conventional differential and integral calculus which we are able to begin at a more advanced level because of the freshman introduction. Here again the calculus is unified with analytic geometry since it is possible to teach geometric concepts with far more ease and brevity when the power of the calculus is available. Applications from the fields of mechanics and economics are used frequently to demonstrate how essential mathematical analysis is to a thorough and ready understanding of the problems in those fields.

Juniors planning to transfer to M.I.T. after six semesters at Middlebury register for both the principal junior course, advanced mathematical analysis, and differential equations, normally the senior course. The course in the junior year, Mathematics 31, continues with geometry, calculus, and mechanics, geometry in three dimensions, multiple integration, infinite series and hyperbolic

COLORFUL COMMENCEMENT WEEK END

The men of the Class of 1902 won the cup by having 100 per cent of its members contributing to the 1951 Fund. Dr. Hermon E. Hasseltine, '02, accepted the LaFlamme Bowl on behalf of his class.

The LaFlamme Bowl was established by a member of the Class of 1937 in memory of a classmate, Lieut. Armand LaFlamme, USNR, who was killed in action during World War II.

Newly-elected Alumni and Alumnae officers introduced at the Reunion Barbecue were: Benjamin W. Fisher, '14, St. Albans, Vt., national president of the Associated Alumni; Dr. Charles J. Lyon, '18, Hanover, N. H., Alumni Trustee; Mrs. Evelyn Clement Green, '32, Burlington, Vt., vice-president of the Alumnae Association; Jane Dale, '39, Boston, Mass., Alumnae Association delegate-at-large; Richard S. Hubbard, '46, Middlebury, Vt., president, Middlebury district; Allison S. Beebe, '38, Waban, Mass., president, Boston district; and Charles N. DuBois, '34, Amherst, Mass., president, Springfield district.

Dr. Carroll B. Ross of Rutland, a member of the class of 1882 and Middlebury's oldest living alumnus, was a special guest of honor at the barbecue program. Two grandsons of Dr. Ross were members of the class of 1951. They are James D. and Gordon S., sons of Dr. Stewart A. Ross of Rutland, a trustee of the college, and also a Middlebury graduate.

functions, with emphasis still on the applications and the role of mathematics per se in modern scientific advancement. At no time does our approach degenerate into empty drill in problem solving.

Middlebury's mathematics offerings in the senior year have undergone the greatest change since 1940. The differential equations course has been condensed to a single semester and in the spring term it is followed by a course in advanced topics of analysis for a small, select group of seniors who may have graduate school work in mind or desire further insight into the rigors of mathematical analysis and proof.

We take a great deal of pride and satisfaction in the success of the relatively new senior course, 46.1, the theme of which is a search for an answer to the question "What Is Mathematics?" This is our survey and integrating course; it continues to meet regularly during the second semester to prepare mathematics majors for the General Examinations at the end of the senior year. It is found practicable to correlate the work of the four years by climbing to new vantage points from which the substance of modern mathematics can be surveyed. One peak is known as Number Theory and later geometry of the projective type leads us across many familiar trails which are easily recognized at each crossing. Graduates of Middlebury with a mathematics major (there are sixteen of them this June) will long remember Professor Ballou's climactic lecture in topology wherein he produces from first one pocket and then another such objects as a doughnut, a rubber ball, scissors, a moebius strip, and a collapsible balloon with figures on its surface, and demonstrates the invariance of certain properties of geometrical figures even when they are subjected to such drastic deformations that all their metric and projective properties are lost.

More and more Middlebury men and women are preparing for careers in insurance, their first objective being the examinations set by the Actuarial Society. For them and majors in the new field of business economics, Middlebury offers courses in the mathematics of finance and life insurance, the latter course including a fairly comprehensive treatment of the elementary theory of mathematical probability. Many NEWS LETTER readers will associate Mathematics at Middlebury with appreciative recollections of one of Middlebury's great teachers, the late Llewellyn R. Perkins, and they will be interested and pleased to learn that Professor Perkins' research into the use of a more rigorous mathematical approach to the problems of banking and finance which was culminated in 1941 with the publication of his text in this field by John Wiley and Sons, has had a pronounced effect on the thinking and practices in use today. Several of the more recent books in this field have adopted and extended ideas and notation first published by Mr. Perkins.

Mathematics majors at Middlebury usually take this course or mathematical statistics parallel with their work in calculus during the sophomore or junior year. The work in statistics of the Mathematics Department has been expanded to a full year because of the increased importance of this subject in physics, biology, social science, and economics. Modern developments in statistical theory are continually revealing new applications of some of the more advanced mathematical techniques so that further correlation of subject matter is afforded by the study of statistics in the later years of our curriculum.

To round out the program of the Department we offer a course designed to train Middlebury graduates for preparatory school teaching. Prior to 1940, a registration of twenty students would be normal for this course; today, it is sometimes difficult to justify its place in the curriculum for, although it is offered only in alternate years, the registration is usually fewer than ten. With so many highly remunerative opportunities open to our graduates, it requires something in the way of salesmanship which so few of us possess to convince a qualified undergraduate that he should prepare to devote his life to teaching. However, we have experienced moderate success. We are indeed proud of the number of recent Middlebury graduates who are excellent teachers of mathematics in colleges, preparatory, and high schools. These are among Middlebury's most valued Alumni for they are able to indoctrinate their most promising pupils with the Old Midd Spirit and recommend for admission to the College only those who can perpetuate the high academic reputation they wish their own degrees to enjoy.

The Mathematics Department staff has changed very little during the past twenty-five years. Professor Burt A. Hazeltine and I have been colleagues during that entire period. Dr. Donald H. Ballou joined us in 1942 soon after Professor Perkins' health forced his retirement. During the next college year Dr. Ballou will teach and study in a program of General Education at Yale University under a grant of the Carnegie Foundation. Graduates of recent years will be interested to learn that Milton Cluff, '48, has accepted an Instructorship with us for the 1951-52 academic year. Since his graduation from Middlebury, Mr. Cluff has been studying at Harvard for his PhD degree.

We are constantly adjusting the content of our mathematics course offerings, consistent with the ideals and aims of a liberal arts curriculum, to adapt them to the rapidly changing demands of a rapidly changing world. Professor E. T. Bell of the California Institute of Technology and one of America's foremost contemporary mathematicians in a recent answer to the question "What has mathematics meant to me?" said that he was sure Euclid had taught him to be immune to all propaganda, including that of mathematics itself. He must have had in mind that Euclid teaches us that without assumptions there can be no proof. What stronger basis can be cultivated in man than a respectably skeptical mind to assist him in his search for truth?
